

Our guided kayak tours and expeditions explore the most distant regions of Haida Gwaii; an area that highlights the best of Gwaii Haanas National Park. The southern tip of Gwaii Haanas consists of secluded island clusters, isolated beaches, jutting headlands and sheltered inlets. Humpback whales and tufted puffins thrive in this rich and diverse marine environment. Our group size is six guests plus two guides. Each person is equipped with a single kayak. Discover the wilderness spirit of these remote, misty isles.

Visit the extraordinary ancient Haida village of Ninistints. This historical settlement is a United Nations World Heritage Site, also known as SGang Gwaay.

Join veteran guide Gord Pincock on his 38th summer of kayaking Haida Gwaii. Enjoy the many advantages of traveling with the most experienced sea kayak guide in Gwaii Haanas National Park.

This document contains general information on our guided sea kayak trips, as well as details on our reservation and cancellation policies. Our website contains itineraries for all our tours and expeditions, a photo & video gallery, an interactive route map, our menu and a current list of trip space availability.

Gwaii Haanas is a remote wilderness archipelago situated in the North Pacific, off the west coast of British Columbia. The area is managed by the unique partnership of Parks Canada and the Council of the Haida Nation. Butterfly Tours explores the isolated and pristine southernmost regions of Gwaii Haanas; an area preserved in its natural state. By concentrating on the most remote regions of the archipelago, we leave behind all signs of civilization. Here, the temperate rainforests include giant old-growth cedar, spruce and hemlock, completely untouched by modern logging.

These trips are not designed to be suitable for everyone. Our kayak tours and expeditions are best suited to participants who are reasonably able-bodied. We encourage the process of informed selection that occurs while people decide which outfitter to choose. Those who enjoy our trips the most tend to read our website in detail before making reservations.

We experience a variety of sea conditions during the wilderness kayak journeys. When it becomes too windy, we remain on shore; there are many scenic campsites that provide great shelter during stormy days. On calmer days, we venture out in the kayaks to experience some gentle ocean swell and light to moderate winds.

Our wilderness kayak journeys provide plenty of time to "simply be" on Haida Gwaii, as well as opportunities to paddle between the islands. Each day we cook wholesome slow food over a driftwood campfire while enjoying quiet, unstructured time on shore. Those who become comfortable with "being in the moment" tend to gain more pleasure from our trips, compared to those whose attention may be continually focused on reaching some other destination.

We offer several trips suitable for relatively inexperienced paddlers, including our accommodation tours. Some previous kayaking experience is highly recommended; attending a sea kayaking course prior to a trip could provide valuable skills to an inexperienced paddler. Additionally, we offer more advanced expeditions specifically suited to experienced kayakers.

The "Butterfly way" refers to our style of travel. It is based in communication, cooperation and the eternal principles of seaworthiness. The Butterfly way evolved during well over a quarter-century of sea kayak tours and expeditions on Haida Gwaii. It is a considerate method of wilderness travel and appropriate conduct, most appreciated by team players.

Even with accomplished paddlers, we ask each group member to cooperate with our professional risk management guidelines. Our groups remain with the guides when on the water; there are very limited opportunities to paddle without the guides. Those who may not appreciate this style of group-oriented risk management are urged to consider a self-guided trip. Most people who willingly work in cooperation with others and value a group's interdependence will appreciate and enjoy our style of travel.

Arriving with appropriate outdoor clothing is essential to each guest's comfort and personal well-being during the trip. A detailed clothing and equipment list is provided upon registration.

Wilderness kayak journeys are guided camping trips. These experiences are well suited to those seeking a degree of personal challenge; the North Pacific can be an exciting place to explore by kayak. Our guides comply with changing weather and sea conditions. Depending on conditions, we generally paddle up to five hours in a day. After a couple of hours in the kayaks we typically go ashore to enjoy lunch before returning to sea.

Accommodation tours provide a "softer" adventure with heated, indoor lodging after each kayak day-trip. These tours are suitable for a wide range of skill levels and preferences; relatively inexperienced paddlers and accomplished kayakers are all welcome, as are those who may prefer not to paddle.

We provide each participant with a Seaward Tyee fibreglass single kayak. Many kayakers seek the freedom and rewards of paddling their own craft, yet not everyone prefers to be responsible for the propulsion of their own vessel. Arriving uninjured, with reasonable balance, reflexes, fitness and coordination will generally enable people to enjoy touring at optimum cruising speed in our single kayaks. Of course, the ability to maintain a positive attitude during challenging moments will also provide a tremendous advantage.

If you are interested in our trips and want to invite a friend, please be sure that your friend also seeks the additional challenges provided by a single kayak. See our website for important information on inviting a friend or partner.

As an alternative, a Seaward Southwind fibreglass double kayak is available; however, we do not provide a paddling partner for the double. (We provide each person with the opportunity to paddle a single kayak.) If you would prefer paddling the double, please be sure to arrive with a paddling partner.

Our fleet of fibreglass Seaward Tyee kayaks can comfortably fit a wide range of people; Tyees are relatively spacious single kayaks. Two of our Tyees are high-volume models, making them even roomier for long-legged people. Before registering on a trip, it is recommended that particularly large people try out a high-volume Seaward Tyee (with a standard-sized cockpit) to ensure that the kayak will fit them.

Team Players & Group Awareness

Our guides promote group awareness and respect; the best interest of the group generally outweighs the desires of an individual. Many people naturally understand and embrace this universal social concept.

Unfortunately, a few people seem to reject group consciousness - they may be accustomed to continually getting their own way. Our trips are not likely to fulfill the desires of these few.

Team players willingly work in cooperation with others and value a group's interdependence. Most team players entirely appreciate and enjoy the trips we offer.

Personal Preparation

Self-propelled multi-day wilderness journeys involve some challenging moments. These moments may not happen each day. When they do occur, the challenges are often quite brief. Many people relish the moments as they arise, some soon consider them a highlight of the trip. Every year, a variety of people enjoy kayaking with Butterfly Tours. Several of our guests are small women in their sixties. Smaller people and less experienced kayakers can enjoy exploring the North Pacific by single kayak, provided they are able-bodied and maintain a positive attitude during challenging moments. Ultimately, a person's flexible and positive attitude, combined with an openness to learning, can become far more important than their perceived level of experience.

Our guides are accomplished kayak instructors, able to assist each guest in developing efficient paddling techniques. However, properly utilizing these techniques requires each participant to arrive uninjured, with dependable reflexes and reasonable balance, fitness and coordination. When these physical capabilities are combined with a positive and flexible attitude, people appreciate and enjoy the wilderness journeys we offer. Each prospective tour guest and expedition participant is encouraged to view the information on cruising speed, available on our website. Additional details are provided online for those inviting a friend or partner.

Our food is healthy, tasty and abundant. Your guide Gord is an excellent chef, with decades of professional campfire cooking experience. Meals are of a vegetarian nature, with the possibility of adding freshly gathered seafoods. We provide wholesome, delicious meals; however, it is not always possible for us to cater to an individual's specific food preferences. Those with special dietary requirements are asked to provide their own preferred menu items suitable for campfire cooking. If you require specific foods, or are entirely unable to eat certain foods, please contact Gord to request more information before registering on a trip.

These trips are not designed to be suitable for everyone. We encourage the process of informed selection that occurs while people decide which outfitter to choose. Please see our website for detailed preparation information.
